FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Lansing, MI; September 11, 2008

Frank J. Kelley, Michigan's longest serving Attorney General, has endorsed Ingham County Circuit Court Judge Paula Manderfield for the Michigan Court of Appeals. Kelley says, "I'm supporting Judge Manderfield because she has developed her own legal reputation the hard way. She earned it by great work and effort."

One of Judge Manderfield's opponents in the competitive four-way primary race, Former State Representative Jim Howell from the Saginaw area, has also endorsed Manderfield's bid for a seat on the Michigan Court of Appeals. Howell served for three terms in the Michigan House of Representatives representing Saginaw, practiced law in Saginaw for 28 years, and is also a former police officer. While in the House, Howell served as the Chair of the Judiciary Committee. Howell stated that "I believe Paula Manderfield is the best qualified in the race. She has judicial experience and life experience which will serve her well as a judge on the Court of Appeals."

Circuit Court Judge Paula Manderfield has been endorsed by over 70 judges and is the only sitting judge running for this position on the Michigan Court of Appeals. Circuit Court Judge Paula Manderfield vows to use her 16 years of judicial experience to ensure all Michigan citizens are treated fairly and justly.
